Washington, Sept. 20.—The house tax bill, as amended by the senate committee, was being whittled today for presentation to the senate tomorrow. Senator Penrose expects a vote by the end of next week.

WILL DELAY OPENING

By the Associated Press.
Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 20.—The postponement of the longest drought in the history of Chapel Hill caused the University authorities today to postpone the opening of the institution from Tuesday, September 27 to Tuesday, October 4. President Cause and his staff, including the officers of Chapel Hill and Dr. H. B. Miller, state health officer, made the decision this morning.

There has been no real rain here since last May, the drought showing only a few drops of rain.

The valuable and great crops of the region have been killed. The meagre summer population has been unable to get along in recent weeks because it has been so dry by a plant disease when it is most crowded.

This morning householders received official notice that beginning today the water would be cut off three times a day until further notice.

It is planned to eliminate the gas saving device in order to make up for the lost time.

HICKORY DAY AT EXPOSITION MONDAY

(BY CAREL VAN HERVIE)
Since the "Made in Carolina" exposition at Charlotte has surpassed in point of attendance and general success all expectations of both exhibitors and originators, and since the crowds have been coming in ever increasing numbers to visit the wonderful show, especially on special town days, the crowning event of the entire program of special days is expected to be next Monday, September 26, which now has been officially designated as Hickory Day.

The second week of the exposition began with a record attendance, and the special days scheduled for this week will bring added thousands to the exposition, all of whom will return to their homes so enthusiastic and so full of praise for the month-long display of Carolina made merchandise, that the final week of the fair show will see the largest attendance of the all. And Monday of the last week is expected to be the banner day of the final days of the exposition.

When Secretary Van Herwie returned home after a three days attendance at the exposition, he felt so optimistic about the success of the undertaking that he immediately called his advertising committee together to plan for a Hickory Day. The committee approved and he then arranged with the management of the exposition over long distances to phone for the date, and made final plans for a successful Hickory Day at the show. It is understood that a large number of business men on Monday will go through the country in cars, leaving here between 6 and 7 o'clock in the morning and reaching Charlotte when the doors of the exposition are thrown open to the public. Special music and speakers are being arranged for at the exposition, and the management of the exposition, according to Van Herwie will cooperate in every way possible to make Hickory Day a record breaker in every respect.

Many Hickory people have already visited the exposition, and most of these are anxious to go again, planning to take part in the exercises on Hickory Day. Hickory has even been noted for its civic pride and cooperation in any undertaking for the boosting of Hickory, and no better way can be devised to consistently boost Hickory than to be at the Charlotte Exposition next Monday.

Van Herwie returns to Charlotte again tonight to remain there to balance a check book, preparing for the welcome reception that is to be given Hickory next Monday.

The tentative plans for Hickory Day includes an interesting address by Colonel Kirkpatrick, president of the Charlotte exposition, introducing W. A. Self, speaker of the day. In favorable weather the official exercises will be held out in the open air, where the speakers address the audience from the grand stand. On inclement days the exercises are held on raised dais within the exhibition building.

Since every Hickory is possessed of sufficient civic pride and patriotism for his home town, a very large attendance is expected at the exposition on Hickory Day; those who cannot join the cavalcade of automobiles making the trip through the country, may reach the exposition by 9:15 in the morning and reaching Charlotte via Barbers Junction at 12:45 p. m. in time for luncheon. A short street car ride takes the visitor direct to the exposition grounds.

HESSIAN SOLDIER'S BELT BUCKLE FOUND

By the Associated Press.
New York, Sept. 20.—A Hessian soldier's belt buckle has been found by historical workers excavating the site of the Revolutionary war prison camp on the old Dyckman farm, near 204th street.

The buckle, of bronze, is in a perfect state of preservation and officials of the field expedition committee of the New York Historical Society say it is one of the few Revolutionary relics of undoubted Hessian origin.

The buckle has been identified as part of the equipment of the Fuhrer Frederick or Erb Prinz Regiment of Hesse, mercenaries brought over by the British to fight Washington's continental army. On the front of the buckle is engraved the monogram "F. F.", surmounted by a crown. The original hook or belt holder is on the back.

The Fuhrer Frederick regiment, originally 688 strong, took part in many engagements in the Revolution. It participated in the battle of Long Island, and was assigned to the left wing of Earl Percy's force at the battle of Fort Mifflin. Later the regiment was sent south and eventually was captured at Yorktown.

Upon the declaration of peace the survivors were returned to New York to await transportation home and during this period they were quartered in the hut cantonment on the Dyckman farm.
